revolutionists was the destruc-f the headquarters of this secret solice, where the archives were largely kept. It is one of the misfortunes of the present situation that this happened, because without question the revelations that would presently have been made concerning these relationships between the Russian and German secret services would have contributed greatly to the fame of Russian anger against Ger-many.

The new government will need to the new government will need to been itself like Cæsar's wife, above suspicion. It will hardly dare to permit any suspected Germanophiles to remain first time a truly Russian national army, with the single purpose of winning a victory in the war and then establishing a real Russian State. There are plenty of officers in the Russian army and navy who would prefer the continsance of the autocratic regime.

Romanoffs Weak Race.

At this point also must be drawn sharply the line of demarcation between the aristocracy proper and the bureaucracy. Despite its strong German taint the aristocracy has included many famiwell wishing the true interests of their country as any other section of the Russian public. With Petrograd firmly held, the army is reasonably safe because Petrograd is the headquarters of the national munitions and manufacturing industries. These establishments will be under the eye of the Government, will be entrusted only to men of unquestionable loyalty, will be kept at the highest producing efficiency by reason of the new seal in the new cause, and will constitute the best possible assurance that the armies at the front will be well provided for.

The Russian army has suffered fearfully through the corruption and wilful neglect and mismanagement of a bureaucracy that deliberately sought to bring about disaster. No army enjoys the experience of being everlastingly defeated. The Russian army now believes that it approaches the time when victory instead of defeat is going to be lits portion, because it believes it is going to be given a fair war and when therefore Russia's danger of the new regime lies in the people all the time when victory instead of defeat is going to be lits portion, because it believes it is going to be given a fair chance to win. and to only a least extent the influential industrial and business classes. See strongly impregnated with German Blood. The house of Romanoff is a good deal more German and Stay than Russian. Through the ties of kinship, of mutual financial interests and of relationships in business and diplomacy the ruling elements in Russia have been closely bound to German Junkerdom, There have been long periods when the secret political police of Russia was even more the implement of German intrigue than the guaranty of Russian governmental security.

Probably the full extent to which this relationship existed will now never be known, for one of the accomplishments of the revolutionists was the destruction of the headquarters of this secret.

respectable, and indeed in another country might well enough be rated as distinctly conservative. The members or much the greater part are professional men and men of substance and affairs. An Englishman who attended one of the latest sittings before the revolution broke described the body as perhaps one of the most correctly attired and formally well conducted legislative bodies he had ever seen.

All Serious Minded.

It was essentially a serious minded. earnest, sincere gathering of men determined to serve its country well. The sans-culottes were not there. A few rough and dirty peasants might be seen on the benches, but hardly enough of them to give color and touch of their quality to the entire gathering. Parliamentary procedure was as correct as in a Western State Legislature on the opening day of the session when nobody dares make a move or a motion outside the routine of things for which his party has, been assigned and religiously studied.

This is the Duma, which, white faced and intent, received from the Craar his ukg-se of prorogation and refused to reviewed to respect the comment of the session there is volve itself. These men had seen the included coming themselves for a week, were bound one to another by sacred pledges. "Now," said Franklin, as he signed alls name to the Declaration of Independence, "we will have to hang together, otherwise we will be very sure to hang separately." There were plenty when the futures for the Entente had taken place on the latest forty-cent advance and that the Allies had sufficient at present. ## WHEAT JUMPS 12C., THEN TUMBLES 15C.

Denial of Entente Buying Causes Drop-Winnipeg Bans Trading in Futures.

CHICAGO, April 28 .- Feverish advances of 12 %c. in the price of wheat here to-

15 to 20c. on the Canadian exchange. Quotations here began to give way at once and continued in a headlong descent for fully an hour. Meanwhile there had been an increasing wave of liquidating sales, which were added to by news that in Omahe there would be no more trad-ing in May wheat except the closing out of old contracts. In the last fifteen minutes of the session week end evening up of business led to somewhat of a recovery, but the day ended with the pit in a demoralized condition.

Uncertainty at the finish was due to the fact that the recent great advance in Chicago prices was based largely on the assumption that upturns in the Winnipeg market were due mainly to purchases for Great Britain and her allies. An immediate further stimulus allies. An immediate further stimulus to excitement and higher prices had been the inference from Washington and Lon-don despatches that there was urgent need for rushing food supplies, especially breadstuffs, to the Entente countries. In violent contrast with such views, however, the big fall of prices at Winnipeg was accompanied by official announce-ment that no buying of Winnipeg wheat futures for the Entente had taken place
